Warren Macdonald

Dear Warren,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for meeting with our group and sharing your remarkable story. Naturally, we all face what at the time feel like insurmountable challenges at some point in our lives. Hearing first hand what you have experienced makes it much easier to put our own problems in perspective and deal more realistically with what we are faced with. Your open and candid sharing of your experience puts a human touch on an otherwise remarkable and almost unbelievable experience.

For days our staff continued to discuss some of the many points you left with us. I think that in addition to helping point out just how capable we are as individuals you also did a good job in reminding us how much stronger we are as a team, rather than individuals. Although we like to think that we can depend only on ourselves sometimes, there are other times when a teammate, in your case Geert, can make all the difference in the world.

For any organization that is interested in helping their people realize how endless their potential really is I would not hesitate for a moment to recommend they have you spend some time with them sharing your remarkable story.

Warmest Regards,
KEIR SURGICAL LTD.
